

BRITAIN ADMITS NEED FOR ARMS CHANGE IN RESPONSE TO GERMANY'S EQUALITY PLEA

$1 SERVICE CHARGE WILL BE WEIGHED IN OPEN HEARINGS

Chairman Perry To Recommand to Public Service Board That Public Sessions on Question Be Held Throughout State.

"SMALLEST USER" WILL HAVE VOICE

Public Expression Object of Proposal; Chairman's Statement Recalls Campaign Contentions.

Chairman James A. Perry, of the Georgia public service commission, official rate-fixing body for public utilities in Georgia, Sunday announced he will recommend to the commission bold hearings at principal cities throughout the state on the question of whether domestic consumers of electricity shall be compelled to pay a monthly service charge of $1 in addition to a charge for actual use of the current.

Chairman Perry said he will make such a recommendation at the meeting of the commission scheduled for Tuesday. Both the public—"the smallest consumer"—and the companies serving electricity will be given opportunity to be heard, Mr. Perry said.

The question of the fairness of the service charge to users of electricity was brought out in the recent campaign by Jule W. Felton, candidate for renomination as a member of the public service commission. During his campaign Mr. Felton insisted that the service charge was unfair and promised that, if renominated, he would cause an investigation to be conducted by the commission looking into the fairness of the $1 service charge.

Felton contended that the Georgia Power Company, by charging each of its domestic consumers $1 a month for the right to use electricity—exclusive of the monthly charge for actual use of such energy—was resulting in a net return of more than 5 per cent on the utility concern's investment in electric meters. He said this situation exists in communities served by other companies throughout Georgia.

Public's Expression Sought.

Mr. Perry's statement was issued independently of charges made by Commissioner Felton. In it, the chairman of the service board pointed out that $1 monthly service charge to domestic users of electricity had resulted in his body being able to reduce the charge for actual usage of current from 9 cents per kilowatt-hour to 5.66 cents per kilowatt-hour. Nevertheless, the chairman said, it has been his contention "just as soon as we bring in the bill we had free of political campaigns, to recommend to the commission that the public be given opportunity to express itself on the form of rates providing for a service charge."

Commissioner Felton, throughout his campaign, had promised, if renominated, he would force the issue before the commission. Felton said he had the support of Commissioners Walter R. McDonald and Perry T. Knight in the service charge challenge.

In his statement Chairman Perry said:

"As stated some time ago, it has

Roosevelt Heads for Oregon To Make Address on Utilities

Democratic Nominee Will Reveal Attitude on Important Question Before Portland Audience Wednesday Night.

By W. B. RAGSDALE.
SALT LAKE CITY, Sept. 18.—(AP)—Rounding out a full week of active campaigning in seven states, Franklin D. Roosevelt headed toward the Pacific northwest tonight to receive reports of conditions and make another of his self-described major speeches at Portland Wednesday.

Seventy-seven electoral college votes are in the hands of the states of Oregon, Idaho, Montana, Kansas, Colorado, Wyoming and Utah, through which the democratic presidential nominee's special train has passed since it left Albany last Monday.

In those states, where he has made appearances on the back platform of his campaign special, talked with many party leaders, made a speech on farm relief and spoken on the railroads, prominent democratic leaders have told their candidate they expect to put the electoral votes of their states in his column in November.

His route tonight as he left the city that nestles in the valley beside the Great Salt Lake, led to Pocatello, Idaho Falls, Idaho, through Dillon, White Sulphur and took him across Washington to Oregon.

His speech at Portland Wednesday will deal with public utilities, a subject to which the New York governor has devoted much attention over a number of years.

James A. Farley, chairman of the democratic national committee, joined the campaign party at Salt Lake City yesterday and went forward with the candidate. Senator Thomas J. Walsh of Montana, also came to Salt Lake City to travel through his state with Roosevelt after he had been stopped at Salt Lake City was Ogden. Leaving there the route led through Cache Junction, Utah, and McCallum, Idaho to Pocatello.

The Roosevelt train left a cheering throng in the Union Pacific railroad yards at 5:00 p. m., mountain standard time.

Governor Roosevelt, accompanied by Governor Dern and Henry F. Blood, the democratic nominee for governor, arrived half an hour before the time set for his departure. Dr. James A. Farley, chairman of the democratic national committee, joined the campaign party at Salt Lake City to travel through his state with the nominee and give him a description of conditions there.

BOLIVIANS OFFER TO STOP FIGHTING

La Paz Is Ready To Call Halt in Gran Chaco If Paraguay Agrees.

LA PAZ, Sept. 18.—(P)—The Bolivian government said it would call an immediate halt to hostilities in the Gran Chaco region, if Paraguay agrees beforehand to such action, in a note sent today to the American neutrals commission in Washington.

The note, signed by Julio A. Gutierrez, minister of foreign relations, was addressed to Francis White, president of the commission. It said:

"In answer to the note of the neutrals yesterday, my government, in accordance with its note of declarations, especially those of its note of the 16th, accepts the immediate cessation of hostilities, if Paraguay likewise agrees beforehand."

"As for securities of non-aggression, my government believes that once an agreement to cease hostilities has been made, it would be logically complied with. It believes the question would be settled to the greatest advantage by a civil war between Paraguay to guarantee non-aggression and to determine the aggressor in case of a violation . . ."

ASUNCION, Paraguay, Sept. 18.—(UPI)—Paraguayan troops, fighting Bolivia in the Gran Chaco, continued today to make heavy gains at Fort Boqueron, according to a general staff communique.

ADMINISTRATION SEES DEMOCRATIC TIDE RISE

certain to speak in Boston, and his speech should be a big help to his party ticket in the Bay State. Republicans have been banting heavily on the fact that Smith was so much more popular than Roosevelt, in Massachusetts, which the republicans have been complacently conceding to themselves.

In addition to making the Boston speech, Governor Smith is almost certain to make another in Newark or Jersey City. Upon the heavily populated northern part of the state, the republicans are pinning their hopes of victory in that state, and they will need all the votes they can get in the big centers of population. The third Smith speech, if one is to be made, will be in Chicago.

Eastern Sector Democratic.

In the group of states extending from New England to Massachusetts, Vermont, New Jersey was seen as the brightest spot for democratic hopes (until the Maine results came in), according to all reports. Next to New Jersey, democratic chances appear to be the best in New York, the Ridgefield, Connecticut, with Massachusetts next. And reports from Connecticut are making republican leaders tremble in their boots.

Roosevelt, after a visit to Vermont and an intimate contact with some of the "grass roots" voters, returned to Albany with the statement that he would not concede even that rock-ribbed republican state to the enemy.

As to the "towers of strength" upon whom Mr. Hoover has been leaning, Secretary of the Treasury Ogden Mills has become the big gun among the administration speakers. But Mills' status as a vote-giver was made evident to all following his speech at Portland, Maine. A few days before the Maine election, he appealed to the people of that state not to "swap horses in the middle of the stream." They answered his appeal by swapping him out for a mule.

Mr. and Secretary of War Patrick J. Hurley were originally slated as the heavy artillery for the Hoover camp and while Mills has exceeded expectations as an orator with his broad Brooklyness accent, Hurley has been something of a disappointment as a "tower of strength."

Pennsylvania Tottering.

It seems now that little or none of the meager democratic campaign fund is to be spent in Pennsylvania, despite the fact that all polls taken thus far indicate Roosevelt is leading Hoover and the confidence of democracy in carrying the state is steadily increasing. They also are confident of returning 11 of the 34 Pennsylvania members of congress.

The G. O. P. certainly has seen better days in Pennsylvania, where harmony seemed for the longest time. Bowditch, ice President Curtis, was selected to open the campaign in Allentown, where the citizens recently chased a squad of prohibition raiders. That's a sample of republican strategy that is pleasing indeed to their opponents.

The G. O. P. is otherwise upset in Pennsylvania by the indictment of Senator James J. Davis, the bolting of their national ticket by a large group of Pinchot's followers, and the defection of General Smedley D. Butler, erstwhile republican aspirant to a seat in the senate, who is now openly campaigning for Roosevelt. To top off the misery which assails the G. O. P. in Pennsylvania, "Old Joe" Grundy, of tariff fame, who in the past has been big collector for the old war chest, is lurking in the background with a tight hand on the purse strings.

Republican campaign leaders, dazed by the result in Maine and the increasing conviction that their best orators are not saying the right things over the radio, decided they had to drop the campaign of trying to picture Speaker John N. Garner as a wild, western radical, when Franklin Roosevelt had never been in the Garner public buildings program and announced that it would relieve unemployment. He had originally characterized the Garner bill as the "worst piece of pork barrel legislation in the history of the country," and this cry was relayed by some of the lesser lights on the stump.

Polls Favor Roosevelt.

The president had suspended the public buildings program in the interest of governmental "economy," announcing that the annual allotment scheduled for this year would not be drawn upon.

Political observers throughout the country are anxiously awaiting the results of the Literary Digest presidential poll heretofore a fairly accurate barometer of th. political trend. Thus far all polls have shown Roosevelt leading. A few of the polls taken in widely separated sections have shown the following results:

Minnesota state fair polling booth at St. Paul: Roosevelt 10,637; Hoover 4,826.

Asbury Park (N. J.) Press, final 4,773; Hoover 2,324; Thomas 341; Upshaw 17; Foster 79. Final vote in Ocean county: Roosevelt 512; Hoover 348; Thomas 39; Upshaw 4; Foster 7.

DEFEAT FOR WETS SEEN BY M'BRIDE

Dry Leader Says Next Congress Will Make No Change in Prohibition.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18.—(P)—F. Scott McBride, superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, said in a statement today it "appears certain" the congress to be elected in November will not submit a resolution for modification of the 18th amendment.

McBride said he based his conclusion "on the failure of the wet to defeat or replace a sufficient number of congressmen who voted against the 18th amendment."

The Anti-Saloon League official said reports from recent primaries strengthened his conclusion neither the coming session nor the next congress "will modify or repeal."

"In Michigan," he said, "every dry congressman up for renomination won by increased majorities. In the same state the dry candidate for governor won by 130,000." In Washington, Senator Jones, whom the wets were attempting to defeat, was chosen senatorial candidate because of his dry record and leadership, was re-nominated.

"In the same state, Congressman Horr, one of the most outspoken wets in the present congress, went down in defeat."

McBride said the result in Maine was a "victory for the liquor forces" but that it indicated "a democratic rather than a wet trend." He said Representative Beedy, the only republican to win, was a prohibitionist in what was considered the wettest district in the state.

"The primary is so far," he said, "have tended to confirm the general rule that former drys who weaken and make concessions to wets are certain to lose dry votes without gaining from the wet side."

"Another significant result of recent primaries," he added, "has been the defeat of prominent wets who identified with the wet leadership. In addition to Horr of Washington, Senator Broussard of Louisiana, the wettest senator in the south, and Mr. Wardell, the wet leader of Michigan, were emphatically defeated."

Bitterly Invective Testament May Free Boy in Pastor's Death

FALL RIVER, Mass., Sept. 18.—(UP)—A bitter invective testament, discovered today among the effects of the Rev. Peter Selinas, 42, former Lawrence priest who died last night of mercury poisoning, indicated he may have killed himself despite his dying opposition against a young parishioner.

A few hours before his death, in the presence of police, he pointed a finger at Joseph J. Turek, 19, and said:

"Let the heavens curse all who have caused my death. The Pharisees betrayed Christ and they felt they did a sacred work, and now those who follow me to do that sacred thing, that is to kill me, let them do it. I could not stand the pain in my heart because of people's gossip about me. Unlucky are those hours when I became the reverend of the national church, when I could not find God's kingdom, but only Satan."

The priest had withdrawn from his Lawrence parish because of difficulties with the parishioners.

Turek, who had said he bought poison tablets which the priest used as a suicide, was held with Albert Silicus, an acquaintance, suspected as an accomplice.

The testament, turned over to police by friends of the priest, was in Lithuanian. Translated, it read in part:

"Let the heavens curse all who have caused my death. The Pharisees betrayed Christ and they felt they did a sacred work, and now those who follow me to do that sacred thing, that is to kill me, let them do it. I could not stand the pain in my heart because of people's gossip about me. ATLANTA, GA., SEPT. 19, 1932.

ON THE SKIDS.

From President Hoover and his medicine ball cabinet, down to the thinning rank and file, the republican party is in a panic as the result of the loss of the Maine elections.

When the news of the sweeping democratic victory—doomed tidings for the administration—was imparted to Mr. Hoover, he was, he said, "disappointed." In truth, the president was dumbfounded, while his expert political writer, Mark Sullivan, was nothing less than flabbergasted. For they both are aware that the disastrous defeat sustained by the republicans in Maine presages the rout of the party on November 8.

The hopes and dreads as well as the views of the administration are reflected in Mr. Sullivan's most recent articles, written for the New York Herald Tribune. It should be said that Mr. Sullivan, while a shrewd, if partisan, observer, is far more astute politically than the average adviser, upon whom Mr. Hoover leans. Mr. Sullivan saw clearly months ago that if Franklin D. Roosevelt were nominated by the democrats, the defeat of Hoover was inevitable. So, day after day, he impressed on democrats the futility of nominating Roosevelt, if they hoped to win.

Referring to the Maine election, Mr. Sullivan writes:

"The democrats have the republicans on a hot spot. The republicans are the victims of a 'squeeze play.' The chief aid to the republicans is improving business. Improving business is impeded by the uncertainty of the outcome of the presidential election."

A short, the more apparent it becomes that the people will get relief from a reactionary, inefficient administration, the slower the improvement in business.

The day before the Maine election Mr. Sullivan, certain that the republicans would win, extolled the barometric qualities of the results.

Equally sure that the republican majority would be cut to a minimum, Mr. Sullivan sought to set the "normal" republican margin at 43,000, when in reality it is about 40,000. In that article Mr. Sullivan wrote: "If the republican majority is less than 10,000, the democrats in the nation will assuredly feel that the presidential campaign is running favorably to them." Mr. Sullivan believed before the Maine election that there was no likelihood of a republican defeat, for he added: "Hardly anybody expects the democrats actually to win Maine. If that should happen, the republicans in the nation would be obliged to take sorrowful notice, indeed."

If Mr. Sullivan had analyzed certain facts which were recorded by the news services and confirmed later by the democratic governor-elect he would have known that the democrats and the republicans in Maine expected the state to go democratic. Indeed, the republicans were so panic-stricken that, as Governor-elect Brain says, "the desperation of the republican managers was revealed when voters who had received public aid were denied the right to vote in Lewiston, Auburn, Waterville and other communities."

It should be said, however, that Mr. Sullivan, in his post-election articles, has not yet sought to minimize the extent of the republican disaster in Maine and is urging the administration to redouble its efforts if it is to ward off the catastrophic defeat now indicated for November 8. But, he cannot refrain from a sympathetic attempt to stem the blow by providing flimsy alibis.

Following Mr. Sullivan's line of thought, but with even greater cancer, William Allen White, of the now very doubtful state of Kansas, pleads with the republican higher-ups "not to delude themselves with alibis."

And Mr. White adds:

The situation revealed in Maine is nation-wide. Maine disclosed what everybody who has considered the political situation knows today—that the drift of sentiment six weeks before the election is strongly against the republicans. . . . If conditions remain unchanged, Mr. Hoover will have a sad time election night.

Even more emphatic in his assertion that the results in Maine portend democratic success in November, is James Morgan in an article in the Boston Globe. Mr. Morgan writes:

The democratic sweep in Maine is the most astonishing and significant event in the political history of that "September state" since 1840, when she went hell-hell for Governor Kent and Tippecanoe and Tyler, too, but by a still smaller plurality than she went for Louis J. Brann on Monday.

Never before, in 75 years, has a straight democratic candidate for governor of Maine won on the eve of an election for the presidency. Moreover, as Mr. Morgan says, with the solitary exception of the chaotic Bull Moose year of 1912, "the must make out of our own heart."

"Give me the spirit, Master Shallow," said that wise old ruffian Falstaff, and he knew what he was talking about. It was not a millionaire, but a famous poet, who saw Jacob's ladder stretching between heaven and Charing Cross. * * *

Sympathizers.

Now that the republicans are awake to the realization that the party is on the short end of the political wish-bone they will intensify their efforts.

If the democrats continue their fight as vigorously as they have begun, Mr. Hoover will be lucky if he carries a dozen states.

THE UNBALANCED BUDGET.

The politically independent Detroit News in an editorial under the heading, "Ask the Congressional Candidates This One," joins the ranks of the large newspapers the country over which are indorsing the enactment of a general manufacturers' sales tax by congress to take the place of the present burdensome and abominable "nuisance" tax.

The News feels that "the tremendously complicated revenue scheme brought forth by the last session of congress is not fulfilling expectations," making it practically certain that "those elected to congress this fall will be faced with the problem of producing a tax system that will work."

This situation, the News continues:

—raises the question whether the next congress can ignore the claims of those who assert that the general sales levy is the least painful form of taxation. It is a good question to propound to the candidate who asks you to support him, and to the bottom of the dominant and sole party organization they were not molested.

This changed immediately after they sought to form a group apart as soon as it happened that had to make the subjection or disappear.

These men were red revolutionaries. One may easily imagine that when opposition running to group formation is not tolerated on the part of red partisans, it is ruthlessly suppressed until it emanates from other sources, like moderate socialists.

Perhaps they had their idea of what a man with a good fat pocketbook means when he goes "communist."

All this is taboo in the New Russia. There is no freedom or party formation in Russia, no freedom of thought along political lines. It's a dictator ship.

(Copyright, 1932, for The Constitution.)

Even before the substitute "nuisance" tax measure had been acted upon by the senate, the mistake was realized and the house was prepared to pass a general sales tax if the higher body would send such a measure back to it.

But the harm had already been done and the measure which finally emanated from the conference committee imposed the heaviest tax burden in the history of the country in peace times.

Many of the manufacturers who had opposed the ways and means committee bill were among those appearing before the senate to urge that it be substituted for the hodge-podge, hit-or-miss measure thrown together to raise, regardless of the burden upon the business and the people of the country, the necessary taxes to balance the budget.

Now the press of the country is joining these manufacturers in demanding the abandonment of the nuisance taxes in favor of a sane and equitable sales tax plan.

The best that can be said for the crude and inexcusable tax measure under which the government is trying to operate within its revenue is that it is what was to have been expected from a congress in the grip of the "mob spirit." Despite the tremendous burden it puts upon the country, it is inefficient and will not raise the taxes necessary to balance the national budget.

If Mr. Sullivan had analyzed certain facts which were recorded by the news services and confirmed later by the democratic governor-elect he would have known that the democrats and the republicans in Maine expected the state to go democratic. Indeed, the republicans were so panic-stricken that, as Governor-elect Brain says, "the desperation of the republican managers was revealed when voters who had received public aid were denied the right to vote in Lewiston, Auburn, Waterville and other communities."

It should be said, however, that Mr. Sullivan, in his post-election articles, has not yet sought to minimize the extent of the republican disaster in Maine and is urging the administration to redouble its efforts if it is to ward off the catastrophic defeat now indicated for November 8. But, he cannot refrain from a sympathetic attempt to stem the blow by providing flimsy alibis.

Rest Awhile!

There was a fashion at one time, writes St. John Ervine, for emotionally pious ladies of the upper middle-class to write lying little romances in which the well-to-do were invited to pity the poor child who had never seen green grass! Even as a boy, when nauturing work of this sort was forced upon me, who would have preferred to read about Deadwood Dick and Buffalo Bill, I could not stomach such thundering lies, as that.

Never see grass—that most persistent stuff which will grow in the least likely places and without any encouragement! Let us not be mawkish! Heaven knows, and you know too, that the effects of the poverty usually bring out the worst in us all, but I deny, and I am sure that Heaven would also deny, this middle-class tosh that the poor are a selected lot. No one is happy when he is hungry, unless he starves for it; for a cause, not an airy-fairy wish, will do more for him. But given reasonable food and shelter, and the company he likes, there is little more in material things that a human being needs for his happiness. That is why I say, "I must make my heart."

"Give me the spirit, Master Shallow," said that wise old ruffian Falstaff, and he knew what he was talking about. It was not a millionaire, but a famous poet, who saw Jacob's ladder stretching between heaven and Charing Cross. * * *

Opposition

In Russia.

There is plenty of criticism in Russia and a good deal of opposition also to the plans and schemes, both cultural and economic, of the regime. Sympathizers are treated with care and consideration. They are handled as if they were a group to be educated and guided, while sympathizers show apathy and intelligence, they are admitted to the party. But it's no easy matter.

They have to know their material dialectics and show themselves conversant with the economic doctrines of Marx and Lenin. After that examination a candidate is admitted to the party of appreciation.

The question arises naturally: How many sympathizers are there? In other words, on whom does the handful of communists in the country depend to work out the vast schemes of indoctrination and control?

The answer is, I think it can be said positively, that the youth is with them. There are in Russia 55,000,000 of people between the ages of 16 and 24. These form the backbone of the revolution. They are the sympathizers, and with this in mind not merely passive onlookers but enthusiastic co-operators.

This must, moreover, be obvious. You can't build as they do here unless you have the active participation of many, many millions.

You Have No Right to Order a Dinner If You Can't Pay the Check

—By Robert Quillen

A certain man and wife had six small children emigrated to a far country, taking with them the oldest child.

When they were comfortably settled in the land of their adoption, they began to think of the five children left in the old country.

"The expense will be great," said the man, "and the law forbids us to bring in more than one at a time without a special permit. But I like the little rascals, and six will cause little more trouble than one."

"Not for you," said the wife.

A native who overheard this conversation introduced himself and offered some advice.

"You are strangers," said he, "and ignorant of our laws. People of the working class, to which you apparently belong, must not bring in more than one child."

"Nonsense!" cried the father. "No law can keep me from bringing in my own children."

"Well," said the native, "the law doesn't actually forbid bringing in. But when you aren't permitted to do much for the extra ones. You see, our teachers and doctors and manufacturers are over-worked and the service they can give to each family is limited by law. They can take care of one child in each family, but that is all."

"What a vile system," growled the father. "What will become of the other five children?"

"Oh, they'll probably live," said the native, "but they won't enjoy it much. You won't be permitted to buy the best food for them. Their clothing must be made of scraps discarded by the tailor. When they get sick the doctor won't attend them and you won't be allowed to buy medicine. They will be denied the service of a dentist; and if they happen to need an operation, they must tough it out or die, for surgeons aren't permitted to waste time on them. Finally, they will be denied any schooling except in the lower grades, and that means they will never be permitted to own property or ride in cars."

The Fitzgerald Advertising Agency, in co-operation for Wesson Oil, has opened an office in Atlanta, it was announced Saturday by the Atlanta Industrial Bureau. Headquarters are now in the 101 Marietta Street building.

"The selection of Atlanta as a center of operations," said Ivan E. Allen, chairman of the bureau, in making the announcement, "is a recognition by this important advertising organization of Atlanta's place in marketing. Executives of the advertising concern think their association with us has stressed the fact that in their work with Wesson Oil and Snowdrift, Pan-Am gasoline and with other national advertisers, they have found this city a bright spot on the southern map."

"As Mr. Clifford L. Fitzgerald, president of the agency, puts it, 'The work we have done here for our clients has brought us very close to Atlanta. For many years we have actually been a part of Atlanta, and the present move is a natural, logical development. We hope that we will be accepted as loyal and friendly Atlantans.'

Atlanta Personnel Chosen. "Because they feel Atlanta is so important," Mr. Allen continued, "the Fitzgerald Agency is building an unusually fine, complete service unit here. Joe L. Killeen, vice president, who heads the local organization has, ever since the founding of the agency, been in charge of the merchandising plans for important advertisers. He directs the advertising of the Pan-American Petroleum Corporation, is in charge of merchandising of the agency, puts it. "The work we have done here for our clients has brought us very close to Atlanta. For many years we have actually been a part of Atlanta, and the present move is a natural, logical development. We hope that we will be accepted as loyal and friendly Atlantans."

Woman's Importance Recognized. Miss James E. Winn has been closely identified with southern advertising for more than 12 years. She will direct the merchandising activities that concern women. For women is a major factor in merchandising. It has been authentically estimated that they directly control 85 per cent of all retail sales and play a dominant part in a large share of the remaining.

Supplementing the present activities of the home economics department and research department of the Fitzgerald Agency, Miss Winn will co-operate not only with clients of the local office, but as well with those of New York and New Orleans on all projects concerning women.

"As many Atlantians know, Miss Winn has been doing this type of work for many southern advertisers, and has recently spent much time in the outstanding retail stores of America, such as Marshall Field in Chicago, actually visiting on customers behind the counter to study buying habits at close range."

Moran Directs Creative Work. "Bruce Moran, recently head of his own organization, governor of this district for the Advertising Federation of America, for seven years, has joined the firm in directing the advertising of southern accounts, and with a history of 17 years' experience in advertising and merchandising work in New York and the south, has joined the organization and will leave this week to study the various departments in New York and New Orleans prior to assuming his duties here. Mr. Moran is one of the few southern authorities on marketing of textiles and allied lines, especially through department stores and similar channels, and has been responsible for the marketing plans of many now well-known commodities in these fields."

"The Fitzgerald organization is unusual in that Mr. Fitzgerald himself is a creative man, and has emphasized the development of the company along creative channels. It is in line with this policy that Mr. Moran has been brought into the company to assist in the creative activities of the Atlanta office, and will draw into the service of Fitzgerald clients the full value of Atlanta's exceptional facilities in art, photography, engraving, and printing, in addition to the resources of New York and New Orleans."

BISHOP CANNON'S SON PASSES UNEXPECTEDLY

HAMPTON, Va., Sept. 18.—(AP)—Dr. W. B. Cannon, son of Bishop James Cannon Jr., of the Methodist Episcopal church south, died today at the "Shores" administration hospital here, where he served as an assistant surgeon.

Bishop Cannon at Davenport, Iowa, was advised of his son's death, which occurred at 5:10 o'clock this morning. Late today plans for the funeral service were being made.

The 28-year-old physician became ill at his home and last night was taken to the hospital, where an examination revealed that he was suffering from a gastric ulcer.

As he grew weaker, the Rev. James Cannon, Dr. D. C. Stevens, and Mrs. B. D. Stevens, of Norfolk, who were notified of their brother's illness, left for Hampton, but did not arrive until soon after his death.

Dr. Cannon was transferred from the regional veterans' hospital in New Haven, Conn., to a local hospital here about two weeks ago.

His academic degree was obtained at Duke University, and his medical education at the Medical College of Virginia.

Dr. Cannon's widow, the former Miss Estes Jacobs, of Cartersville, Ga., and little daughter, Lucy Virginia Cannon, are among the survivors.

Surviving brothers and sisters are the Rev. James Cannon, of Duke University; Mrs. Stevens, Mrs. H. Stockham, Birmingham, Ala.; R. M. Cannon, El Monte, Cal., and Dan P. Cannon and Edward Cannon, of Washington, D. C.

Bishop Cannon last saw his son last Sunday, at the latter's home in Hampton, but at that time the physician was said to have shown no indication of being ill.

DR. ABRAHAM DIAZ. NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 18.—(UP)—Dr. Abraham Diaz, 57, for years prominent in political, social and medical circles in Mexico, and in later years in the United States, died yesterday.

He was a senator in Mexico under President Lizardo de Tala, but when the latter was exiled Dr. Diaz came to the United States. Later he became friendly with President Porfirio Diaz, and returned to Mexico.

SENATOR DAVIS FACES LOTTERY TRIAL TODAY. NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—(UP)—United States Senator James J. Davis, former cabinet officer, goes on trial tomorrow charged with violating the lottery laws. The charges arise from charity fund drives conducted for the lottery.

The senator is under indictment on counts of the distribution and sale of lottery tickets and conspiracy in conducting a lottery. He was indicted with six others on August 11, pleaded not guilty on August 30, and was released in $1,000 bail.

COLLEGE GAMES GATHER FORCE THIS WEEK-END

L. S. U. To Meet Texas Christian in Standout Battle.

By Herbert W. Barker,
Associated Press Sports Writer.

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—(UP)—That loud explosion you'll hear this weekend will be simply the inter-collegiate football campaign getting under way. There already have been a few minor sputters here and there serving as warnings of the maelstrom rush yet to come.

The first game this week will be on practice, of course, but there are a few scattering games on the program which promise considerable competition.

Perhaps none will be watched more closely than Louisiana State's tangle with Texas Christian at Baton Rouge, a test of Southern conference and Southwest conference football.

FIRST UNDER JONES.

Louisiana State will be making its first start under the coaching regime of Captain Lawrence (Biff) Jones, who used to turn out some fine teams in the days before he became a college football coach.

The first two Southern conference games will pit Virginia Military against Kentucky and Sewanee against South Carolina. V. M. I. and Sewanee both opened their seasons yesterday, the Military eleven defeating Ken Collier's team 12-0, while the Tennessee Teachers' whipping 12-0. Alabama, Auburn, Clemson, Duke, Maryland, Washington and Lee, Mississippi, North Carolina, North Carolina State, Tennessee, Vanderbilt and Georgia also will make their season debut but against non-conference opposition.

In the far west, California, which tripped up West Coast Navy and the California Aggies in a double-header yesterday, meets a strong "Independent" in Santa Clara, while Washington is tackling Gonzaga, which held Oregon State to a 19-16 score last week.

Southern California, with prospects of another powerful array, opens against Utah, perennial champions of the Rocky Mountain conference. Stanford, which beat the San Francisco Olympic club yesterday, meets San Francisco, Washington State, Oregon State, Oregon and the University of California at Los Angeles have booked lesser opposition.

DUQUESNE PLAYS.

In the east, a dozen of the major colleges will open up but only West Virginia tackles strenuous opposition.

The Mountaineers will face Elmer Layden's Duquesne outfit in Pittsburgh Friday night and a close battle is in prospect. Duquesne whipped Westminister, 20-0, in its first game last week.

Only Chicago, of Big Ten teams, will be active the Maroons facing Minnesota, Michigan State, slated to meet Lawrence, and Michigan State, which opens against Alcorn, conspire to give the midwest a little heavier representation in this week's schedule.

Akansas, Rice and Texas of the Southwest conference open against Arkansas, Kingsville, Teachers and Dallas, while, respectively, and the Rocky Mountain program is headed by a clash between Brigham Young and Montana State. The Utah Aggies will play Idaho, southern branch, and Denver will confront Colorado Mines.

10 Chisox Players End Season Today

CHICAGO, Sept. 18.—(UP)—After tomorrow's game with the Philadelphia Athletics the 1932 baseball season will be over for 10 members of the Chicago White Sox. Manager Lou Foudreau announced today that he had excused Ted Lyons, Sam Jones, John Klemek, Chuck Johnny Hodges, Pat Fotheringham, Louis Bales, Carely Selp and Red Faber from the final week's road games and those eight players will leave for their winter homes. Charley English and Vic Frasier already have left the squad because of injuries.

DRY LAW IS ISSUE IN NEW YORK VOTE

Tuesday Primary Will Find Many Contests Hinging on Prohibition.

By the Associated Press.

Prohibition figures in primary elections in New York and Massachusetts tomorrow while in Wisconsin the La Follettes come to grips with the rival republican wing of economic issues. In all three states outstanding contests involve prohibition.

In several districts in the Empire state the issue is drawn between the proponents of national prohibition and those favoring a change. Outstanding is a republican contest between Representative Frederick M. Davenport, a prohibitionist, and Daniel F. Strobel, the 33rd district comprising Herkimer and Oneida counties.

Former Senator James W. Wadsworth, an outspoken repealer, is unopposed for the republican nomination for congress from the 39th district.

In Massachusetts considerable attention will be focused on a fight between Representative Robert Luce, who has taken his stand on the republican platform prohibition plank; Ray W. Houghtaling, Cambridge, a general advocate; and William H. Murphy, of Brookline.

In Wisconsin, Governor Philip La Follette has declared for "redistribution of wealth" by taxation while former Governor Walter J. Kohler has advocated a "cut costs" plan and a new program.

A second major battle finds Senator Blaine, a member of the La Follette wing, seeking renomination against John B. Chapple, young Ashland editor.

ALBANY, N. Y., Sept. 18.—(AP)—The prohibitionists are having in doubt the outcome of virtually half of the 17 congressional contests in New York state's primary election Tuesday.

The issue is found in the bulk of the 10 republican fights for nomination; those battling in the seven democratic fights are in accord on the republican plank adopted by the convention of the national prohibition party.

Nine of the republican primary battles are in the upstate districts and entered into the larger proportion of these is the prohibition question, defined in varying degrees of clarity.

One of the outstanding battles between the prohibitionists and those seeking a change in the law is found in the 33rd district, embracing the midstate counties of Herkimer and Oneida. Here Representative Frederick M. Davenport, outspoken proponent, seeks renomination in the face of a vigorous opposition by a veteran politician, Daniel F. Strobel.

"Dan," who several years ago settled a deadlock over a nomination for sheriff with a game of "high, low, jacks," which he won, has based his campaign for nomination for congress on a "cut costs" plan.

In the western end of the state another republican, veteran of the lower house, seeks renomination on a strictly dry platform. He is Representative Daniel A. Reed, of the 43rd district, running for republican nomination with the endorsement of the drys and the law presentation party.

The wet opposition to Reed is split in the cornered fight between Joseph Sullivan, like Reed a Dunkirk resident, and Samuel A. Carlson, many times mayor of Jamestown. Carlson also is engaged in a two-man fight for the republican nomination with Gerald A. Higgins of Lakewood.

Less clearly defined is another contest in the normally dry territory of the "southern tier," the row of counties including those bordering the Pennsylvania state line. Here, in the 10th District of Broome, Chenango, Delaware and Otsego, Representative John D. Clarke, seeking renomination, has expressed himself in accord with the prohibition views of President Hoover, while his opponent, Leon Ray Steenberg, having backed the law preservation party and the Women's Christian Temperance Union.

In the near-by 37th district, Representative Gale H. Stalker, who has definitely declared himself for prohibition, is opposed by W. Sterling of Bath, son of the candidate to the state department of education. Ernest E. Cole, Cole is described as adhering to the attitude expressed in the republican prohibition convention declaration.

While he is unopposed in the nominating name of former United States Senator James W. Wadsworth, republican candidate for congress from the 39th district, has attracted attention.

English Inventor Shot By Mechanical Man

BRIGHTON, England, Sept. 18. (UPI)—Alpha, the mechanical man, turned on his inventor today in the manner of Frankenstein's monster.

Harry May, who built the huge man of steel, was demonstrating Alpha's powers before a Brighton audience and was showing how the robot is able to fire revolver.

Before May could give the command, Alpha turned suddenly, pointed the gun at the inventor and fired. The bullet passed through May's right hand.

"I always had a feeling Alpha would turn me in some day," May said. "This is the first time I have ever disobeyed my commands. I don't know why he fired before I gave the signal."

Alpha, in addition to his ability to shoot, reads newspapers and can tell time.

and the impending world economic conference were alluded to.

"A desirable consummation cannot be obtained by peremptory challenge or withdrawal from the deliberations (at Geneva), which are about to be resumed," it was contended. "It can only be reached by patient discussion through the medium of a conference between the states concerned."

Crus of Statement.

The crus of the British statement was the proposal for a new convention arising out of the Geneva conference of 64 powers and mutually agreed upon by them. The object of this convention would be the case of heavily armed powers, the largest possible reduction, and in case of lightly armed powers, at any rate no material increase."

"It would indeed be a tragic paradox if the outcome of the first disarmament conference was a general armament and actual rearming of the state. The United Kingdom government therefore conceives the object of the conference to be to frame a disarmament convention upon the principle that each state adopts for itself in agreement with others, a limitation which is self-imposed and freely entered into, as part of mutual obligations of the signatories to one another."

"There will thus be as a result of the convention no distinction of status; everyone's armaments will be controlled by the same process and limitations which have already been agreed upon by the Geneva Conference."

ARMS RULE ASKED IN COAL MINE AREA

Illinois Sheriff Begs for Troops After Newspaper Office Is Bombed.

TAYLORVILLE, Ill., Sept. 18. (UPI)—The sheriff of Christian county appealed for martial law today after the Taylorville Breeze, daily newspaper, was bombed as the climax to a month of coal mine terrorism. Another bomb simultaneously wrecked the local headquarters of the United Mine Workers of America.

"Troops must come to Taylorville, the business life must carry on," said Editor C. F. Jewell, who managed to publish an extra edition this afternoon, even though some of his machinery was wrecked.

The bombs exploded shortly before dawn. All the front windows were blown out and some of the equipment was shattered in the Breeze plant.

Sheriff Charles Wonecke led delegation to the home of Governor Louis L. Emmerich to ask for soldiers.

The Association of Commerce previously had attempted to hold a meeting to ponder the siege of violence, but was forced to adjourn when striking miners forced their way in.

Jewell recently went to southern Illinois where he met miners and said they seemed happy and satisfied.

So vigorous were protests by striking miners that Jewell published another article defending himself. He said it was not taking sides, but rather a reported he felt it his duty to tell an accurate story of southern Illinois conditions.

Starling with last month's march of 10,000 strikers upon Christian county mines, there has been a series of bomb outrages. This morning miners were evacuated at Kimball, and the mine filling station was bombed at Pauline. John Murphy's house was bombed, and a shotgun fusillade was fired into the home of German French and Italian roles. Mr. Crooks, joint recital with Grace Moore, ment on the British disarmament statement until the cabinet had had time to study the ramifications and implications in its entirety.

The note to the foreign office today. Meanwhile cabinet members were inaccessible.

Alfred Hugenberg's nationalist newspaper Montag, dissented from the British idea as expressed in the statement and repudiated the idea of a compromise.

HUGENBERG WITHHOLDS COMMENT

BERLIN, Sept. 18.—(AP)—The German government today withheld com-

lection to the senate in 1926 he enters the 1932 general election on the same repeat platform for which he fought in 1926.

Among other contests viewed as having elements of the prohibition trouble is that between Representative Francis D. Cuklin, standing on his record for support of the prohibition law, and Edmund R. Wilcox, making his appeal for a change in prohibition.

The newspaper headed its dispatches from London thus: "Sharp English Note."

The document was characterized as an English effort "by juridical sophistries to make ineffective part five of the Versailles treaty."

(Part five of the Versailles treaty commands the military, naval and air armament of Germany to 100,000 men.)

Representing extreme nationalism opinion the paper's editorial comment

might be interpreted as a straw in the wind, which, if true, indicates that Germany will hold fast to her renunciation of attending the Geneva conference.

Atlanta Music Club Gives Evening Musicale at Women's Club Oct. 4

Atlanta Music Club, under the guidance of its new president, Mrs. Howard Claude Smith Jr., is swinging into the season with plans for a brilliant series of concerts featuring imported artists and of local artists. One objective of the club has always been to recognize and exploit local artists presenting them to the public in their "own" programs which take place every Friday and third Saturday in the auditorium of the Atlanta Women's Club. All the artists concerts are given in Wesley Memorial Auditorium. A brilliant feature of the club's programs of the current season will be the opening meeting, which will be an evening meeting to be held Tuesday evening, October 4, in the Women's Club auditorium, and followed by a reception in the ballroom of the club. The series of artist concerts sponsored by the Atlanta Music Club will be announced next Sunday.

Officers and chairmen of the club for the season 1932-33 are as follows: Mrs. Howard Claude Smith, president; Lee Edwards, first vice president; Mrs. Thad Morrison, second vice president and chairman of morning musicales; Mrs. Ruth Rankin

An enjoyable occasion was the "doll party" at which Mrs. Raymond Cady entertained Saturday afternoon at her home at Hapeville, honoring her little niece, Miss Anne Montene Melson. The house was attractively decorated with strings of pearls hanging from the mantels and doors. Golden glow flowers, with pink and cream roses, were placed in vases and baskets, carrying out the color scheme of nile green and gold effectively. As the guests assembled they were met by the little hostess who had dressed up a pretty freak of pink crepe de chine and her large doll was dressed in white and pink organdy.

The main feature of entertainment was the "doll show" and their relatives for the doll kindergarten. The doll show was held in the music room, where tables were used for the display of the 24 dolls present. Mrs. Forrest Attaway and Mrs. Boone Felker were judges and the following prizes were presented: First prize, Miss Mary Lou Williams; the doll with the prettiest face; Miss Montene Melson won having the prettiest doll and doll carriage; Miss Frances Pace was lucky in entering the smallest and twin dolls; Miss Anita Eppinger had the cutest doll; Mrs. Mabel Haskett was winner for the best-dressed doll; Miss Montene Melson owned the largest doll; Miss Elizabeth George was given a prize for having the doll that looked most like a little girl, and Miss Sara Loney brought the doll that looked most like a baby. After the hostess presented all prizes, the dolls were allowed to enter kindergarten in their own names, and a doll lace dollie contest was enjoyed, and the little girls used attractive-colored paper in an artistic manner, and Miss

Y. W. C. A. Health Education Classes To Open on October 1

With the arrival of Miss Frances Keller, new director of health education at the Y. W. C. A., plans go forward for one of the most successful and beneficial physical culture programs offered by the Y. W. C. A. The new schedule, coming from the Atlanta school, will tell of her interesting experience. Miss Inez Davis will begin October 1. Everyone entering the classes should see their physical examination is up-to-date and then be ready to register for classes during the week of September 26-30. By having registrations early, Miss Loller will be all set to begin actual exercises October 1. Appointments may be made with either of the "Y" physicians, Dr. Maude Foster, 515 Hotel building; Dr. Stuart Shipley, Doctors' building, or Dr. George Williams, 12th Floor, avenued. Mrs. C. E. Drummond, swimming instructor, will continue her duties at the pool. The swimming schedule will be rearranged to suit the convenience of children returning to school and those who will now be charged with the approach of fall and winter. As the "Y" pool is maintained at the same comfortable degree all the year round, and is the only indoor pool available to women and girls, its popularity continues throughout the winter.

Girl Reserves.

Girl Reserves are eager to begin club work in preparation for the Reserve committee will entertain advisers and officers at a rally early in October. Mrs. J. F. Henry, chairman of the committee, will be hostess and will be assisted in entertaining by Miss Anne Prudmore, Girl Reserve secretary. The Girl Reserve committee will be in charge of the club's perfect plans for this rally. There are 20 Girl Reserve clubs organized in the senior and junior high schools and each club plans a novel opening program to give an enthusiastic boost to coming activities. The Decatur girls will open their club and entertain at outdoor parties the Russell High girls will stage a pep rally in the school cafeteria. The youngest group in the Y. W. C. A. is the Girl Reserve group of the Central Presbyterian church, which was formed in 1918. The teenagers will have recreational opportunities and they will present a play, "World Circle," before the church auxiliary and plan other interesting features. Leaders in this club are Miss Ringer Hornsby and Miss Jean Crawford.

CULBERTSON ON CONTRACT BY ELY CULBERTSON, World's Champion Player and Greatest Card Analyst.

Masters of Bridge

Mr. Nathan Kelly, of Brookline, Mass., is said by his friends to be the best card player in Boston, and with their natural pride in the pre-eminence of the capital of New England, they add that it goes without saying that he is hence the best card player in the world. Mr. Kelly does not often participate in tournaments play at Contract Bridge, so the few examples of his skillful card reading.

The hand below, however, is such a beautiful exhibition of card reading and play that it gives me great pleasure to show it as an example of Mr. Kelly's skill.

Midsummer Madness

By Sterling North

"From myself?"
"You're bringing half this sorrow on yourself."

"In what manner?"

"By being almost blind to your own danger every time you think of Eddie Carlson."

"We've already wasted too many words."

"Sweetheart."

"Dinner is over and I think you'd better be going."

"Bobby..."

"I am leaving for Chicago tomorrow. Don't bother to come down to see me. I have much more to do than you would protect Eddie, Jack. It's that you don't love me enough to grant my request."

"But I can't leave you here unprotected all night."

"I can find a gun quite as easily as the trophy room," Bobby said.

Jack, with rising anger, was about to go when Martha, with hands trembling, burst into the dining room carrying a sealed envelope.

"It . . . it came up on the dumb waiter," she said. "It's for you, Miss Horner."

When Bobby tore open the note which had been sent up on the dumb waiter she had an impulse to share the contents with Jack, but suppressed it.

"What does it say?" Jack asked.

"It's from Eddie," Bobby said. "It isn't exactly polite to ask about my correspondence."

"You ought to be spanked," Jack said with irritation. "As if I shouldn't know what the mob is threatening now. Give it to me."

"I won't."

"Very well, young lady, you may keep your note. But for once I am going to be the master of this situation. Come with me."

Steel's Improvement Brings New Cheer in Business World

BY FRANK H. McCONNELL
NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—(AP)—Further gains in a number of manufacturing lines were reported last week, and there were indications that moderate seasonal improvement was taking place in the machine and industrial carloadings made a favorable comparison for the week ended September 10 after allowance for the usual Labor Day letdown. Steel production gained moderately, although admittedly its gains had not been up to some of the earlier expectations of Wall Street.

But probably the most conspicuous improvement was shown in electric power production. Considerable further pickup was noted in the textiles and there was a fair gain in retail trade, but the overall picture was not so good as in earlier hand-to-mouth buying policy.

The weekly carloading statement showed a movement of 501,824 cars against 559,727 in the week ended September 3. This decline of little more than 10 per cent was somewhat smaller than usually experienced in the Labor Day week.

Steel production gained to above 15 per cent of capacity against a 12 per cent level in the week ended September 3.

The electric power production figures, which have been closely studied by many businessmen for an indication of increase in manufacturing activity slipped off, due to the Labor Day holiday, to 1,423,7700 kilowatt hours against 1,484,7000 the previous week. However, the comparison with figures of one year ago was distinctly encouraging. The decline was narrowed down to 8.7 per cent below last year, the most favorable comparison since March, in the week before, the decline was 10.4 per cent, which, in turn, compared with a decline of 12.3 per cent the previous week. The latest improvement was due in substantial measure to the pick-up in manufacturing of textile goods.

An interesting survey of business opinion was collected during the week by the Oil Paint and Varnish Reporter, which sent questionnaires to a number of leading industrialists. In a great majority of cases, the men interrogated reported some gain in buying. Considerable significance was attached to the compendium which will be published tomorrow because the paint business is usually among the first to respond to any improvement in general business activity.

"Judging from the experience in previous depressions," said Lamont Du Pont, president of E. I. du Pont de Nemours, "we would expect that business will continue to improve during the balance of this year, with a probable slackening off at the time of election, and during 1933 will average very much better than the level experienced today and the past few months."

"There is evidence," said E. J. Gresham, president of the National Lead Company, "that the small manufacturing industries have been able to readjust their business to changed conditions and take advantage of the rapidly growing decrease in the cost of raw materials. We believe that business conditions will improve with the smaller manufacturers and the farmers and miners, and later on will react to the advantage of the more important manufacturers."

Another interesting sheet on the automobile and truck market, which at the present time is commanding widespread attention, was furnished by James Simpson, president of the Commonwealth Edison Company, who said that reports received by him indicated improvement—"nothing violent but a gradual upturn."

NEW ORLEANS COTTON SHOWS DOWN TREND

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 18.—(AP)—Active liquidation which started in the cotton market immediately after the release of the government's estimate on Thursday of the preceding week, continued throughout the past week, with only one notable exception, the time being satisfied shows covering, it became evident from the volume of liquidation that a huge larger long interest had been carried over the bourse period than usual, owing no doubt to the confident belief that the government would materially reduce its August estimate of 11,300,000 bales, which estimate it actually increased to 11,400 bales. Net decline for the week was 162 points.

The downward tendency of prices during the week was aided by more firms, both in the belt, which has had a tendency to increase crop views as well as to encourage picking and ginning.

The one saving feature of the week was the good demand for spot cotton in all southern markets, both domestic spinners and foreign buyers being active in the market for liberal supplies.

The following shows the high, low and closing sales in the New Orleans futures market during the past week compared with a year ago:

CURB PRICES SOFTEN IN ERRATIC TRADING

BY JOHN L. COOLEY,
NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—(AP)—Leading curb stocks swung widely last week, most of the movement being on the part of the market.

There was, however, some recovery toward the week-end when it appeared that selling had dried up, although the period ended with most prices substantially lower than at the beginning.

Utilities probably displayed greatest strength, while the oil companies declined.

Electric Bond & Share was severe, amounting to several points on each of two or three days.

Oils tended lower, influenced by smaller gasoline consumption and sporadic heaviness of crude prices.

Gasoline pools remained passive and with some from such sources absent the market thinned out noticeably on the decline.

Trading had become much less active by Friday and Saturday, and the market assumed a more routine appearance.

PRINT CLOTHS SHOW SYMPATHETIC DECLINE

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—The past week has been quiet in the cloth market and with some exceptions the trend in prices has shown a weakness similar to cotton, other commodities being the most sensitive to any change.

Print cloths, always the most sensitive to price movements, showed a slight decline.

Electric Bond & Share was severe, amounting to several points on each of two or three days.

The carriers revived moderately, however, but were still considerably under the prices of Monday.

The United States government section remained fairly strong in the two days.

Extreme fluctuations of a few utilities and industrials affected the averages of these two groups, but the better grade loans moved within a narrow range.

Foreign obligations were mostly French bonds improved as it became certain the chamber would approve the government's huge conversion scheme.

Trading on the whole, was unusually inactive except in a few of the low-grade rails which, at times, recorded heavy turnovers. Action of the interstate commerce commission in the truck plate $200,000,000 application against one-fourth was interpreted heavily and the rail averages slumped two points on Thursday.

SPECULATIVE ISSUES HOLD BOND SPOTLIGHT

BY VICTOR EUBANK.
NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—(AP)—Speculative issues furnished the principal highlights in the bond market during the past week, while prime loans generally stood on the sidelines and watched the performance.

Trading on the whole, was unusually inactive except in a few of the low-grade rails which, at times, recorded heavy turnovers. Action of the interstate commerce commission in the truck plate $200,000,000 application against one-

Extreme fluctuations of a few utilities and industrials affected the averages of these two groups, but the better grade loans moved within a nar-

Foreign obligations were mostly

French bonds improved as it became certain the chamber would approve the government's huge conversion scheme.

Trading on the whole, was unusually inactive except in a few of the low-grade rails which, at times, recorded heavy turnovers. Action of the interstate commerce commission in the truck plate $200,000,000 application against one-fourth was interpreted heavily and the rail averages slumped

two points on Thursday.

The carriers revived moderately,

however, but were still considerably

under the prices of Monday.

The United States government section remained fairly strong in the two days.
